

A Tribute

to Our 25-Year Members

The National Environmental Health Association thanks and honors the individuals listed below who have been members of the association for 25 years or longer. We sincerely appreciate their commitment to the association and to the environmental health profession. NEHA asked a few of these members to describe the personal and professional benefits of their tenured membership with the association, as well as why they initially became a NEHA members. Quotes from these responses are sprinkled throughout the tribute.

"I soon found after joining NEHA that the organization was ideal for advancing my professional goals and fulfilling my personal interests in environmental health. It offered me a wealth of opportunities to obtain and share new information, become involved in various environmental health activities and initiatives, and meet and develop professional associations and personal friendships. Of the many professional associations I have belonged to in my long career in environmental health, this has been the most satisfying one and the one I have been most proud to be associated with."

"I initially joined NEHA because I saw it as a way to enhance professional growth and development, including the opportunity to interact—formally and informally—with members, sharing knowledge and insight on a range of environmental health issues. Members of NEHA bring to an exploration of environmental health issues a rich mix of perspectives, skills, and knowledge which bodes well for the continuing growth of the association, and from which I have gained numerous unquantifiable benefits."

"I find NEHA's publications to be very informative and I have been able to attend a number of its national conferences. I found the conferences to be very informative because they brought in expert speakers on national and international levels. NEHA's publications and conferences bring additional knowledge on how to solve problems and provide breaking news before you hear it on the local level. I have benefited not only from the communications from NEHA, but from being able to meet with NEHA's staff and some conference presenters. I now know whom I am speaking with, and more importantly, who to go to when additional contacts are needed."

"I joined NEHA shortly after acquiring my REHS in order to keep current on environmental and other work-related issues. The benefit of membership has been the professional affiliations I have made throughout the years with highly dedicated coworkers from both state and national levels and the ability to share experiences with these professionals in a manner in which only those in the field could truly appreciate."

"Environmental health 25 years ago was teetering on the edge of the past and the future. I became a member in order to get a broader view of environmental health practice beyond what I saw in my own workplace and organization. I envisioned NEHA as the place to establish a wider network of peers and to learn how those peers were delivering environmental health to their communities in new and different ways, rather than remaining anchored to the axiom, 'That's the way we've always done it.' And I wanted to have more opportunity to learn leadership and management skills and hone my knowledge of current practices. Being involved in NEHA opened so many doors to meeting people nationally and throughout the world. Being part of NEHA's board of directors taught me leadership and management skills not easily obtained in my work-a-day world. Attendance at AECs and reading the Journal improved my skills and showed me new ways of doing things at work and in the community. Being involved in NEHA became the way my eyes were opened to possibilities within environmental health!"
