

Environmental Health

Dedicated to the advancement of the environmental health professional

Volume 72, No. 3 October 2009

About the Cover:

As with other professions, EH professionals are interested in moving up the ladder of success in their field and gaining the salary increases and responsibilities that go with that climb. In this month's cover feature, "Job Satisfaction and Issues Related to the Retention of Environmental Health Professionals in North Carolina," the authors discovered that retention of EH professionals is a problem because of dissatisfaction with salary and career advancement. The authors point out that the retirement of baby boomers without enough of the younger generations stepping in magnifies this issue.
