

Environmental Health

Dedicated to the advancement of the environmental health professional

Volume 74, No. 1 July/August 2011

ABOUT THE COVER

The authors of this issue's cover feature identified a strong need in rapidly growing, less-developed countries (LDCs) for environmental public health training due to pollution and other EH issues that arise with rapid growth and urbanization. "Promoting Environmental Public Health in Rapidly Urbanizing Areas of Less-Developed Countries in Africa: A Collaborative Interdisciplinary Training in Ibadan, Nigeria," details their efforts to train health professionals in environmental and occupational science, epidemiology, exposure assessment, and prevention. As our cover reflects, the authors are looking ahead to a more environmentally friendly and healthful future as growth and transformation continue in LDCs throughout the world, where the need for EH training will only increase.
