

National Environmental Health Association in partnership with
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
National Center for Environmental Health
Environmental Health Services Branch
Indian Health Service
Environmental Health Support Center

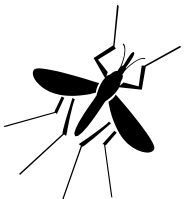

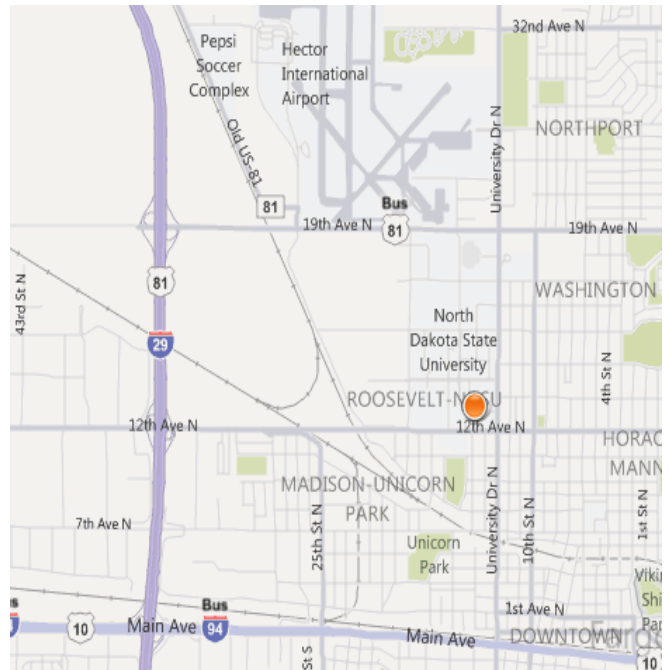

FREE, 3-day (8 am til 5 pm) workshop:
Biology and Control of Vectors and Public Health Pests:
The Importance of Integrated Pest Management

August 9-10-11, 2011
North Dakota State University
Memorial Union--Plains Room
1401 Administration Drive
Fargo ND 58108

NEHA, in collaboration with CDC and IHS, is pleased to announce the exclusive availability of this FREE three day workshop. The workshop includes presentations from several of the top entomologists and IPM experts in the U.S., interactive group activities and group discussion on a variety of important topics including:

- Integrated pest management (IPM)
- Arthropod borne diseases of public health importance
- Rodent management, Parts 1 and 2
- Bed bug biology, control and interactive inspection
- Mosquito management
- Tick management
- Health Effects of Pesticides
- Pests in the Housing Environment
- Pest in the Food Environment and Interactive Inspection
- Vectors and Climate Change

To register or for more information, please contact:
Susan Peterson at speterson@neha.org, phone 847-563-8242 or Tom Dickey at tdickey@neha.org, phone 563-556-0841